the unparalleled dexterity of the natives of India with the sword, as well as of Napler's simplicity of character. After the Indian battles, on one occasion a famous juggler visited the camp, and performed his feats before the General, his family and staff. Among his performances, this man ent in two, with a stacks of the woord a lime or lemm. stroke of the sword, a lime or lemon placed in the hand of the assistant.

Napier thought there was some collusion between the juggler and his assistant. Todivide by a sweep of the swert, on a man's hand, so small an object without touching the flesh, he believed to be impossible, though a similar incident is related by Scott, in his romance of the "Talisman."

"But why the left hand, and not the right?"

"Because the right hand is hollow in the center, and there is a risk of cutting off the thumb; the left is high, and the danger will be less."

Napier was startled.

"I got frightened." haid he; "I saw it was an actual feat of swordmanship, and if I had not abused the man as I did before my staff, and challenged him to, the trial. I bonestly acknowledge I would have retired from the encounter. However, I put the lime on my hand, and held out my arm steadily. The juggler balanced himself, and with a swift stroke, cut the lime in two pieces. I felt the edge of the sword on my hand, as if a cold thread had been drawn across it; and so much," he added, "for the swordsmen of India whom our fine fellows deleated at Meeanee."

Causes of Death. The last publication of the British death rate and its causes is curious readdeath with a rose leaf.

A young man living not quite a thousand miles from Loretto, Ky., not long ago laid siege to the heart of a young lady in Louisville, who in due time surrendered the fortress into his keeping. A day was appointed for the nuptials, friends were invited, good things to est and drink were provided, and all the concomitants of well-regulated weddings were prepared. The day came, the guests came, but the bridegroom—"the young man from the country"—came not. He made default and the question on every tongne was, "Why is this thua!"

The mother of the bride that was to be came up to Loretto and went out to interview the son-in-law that was to have in the death rate and its causes is curious read-ing.
